The Register, thoroughly ashamed at to appear very honest by revealing party secreta and confessing certain causes of defeat. In another, referring to the hope of "conservative" journals that Grant will betray the party that elected him, the Register with much candor assures its readers that such a suggestion is preposterous, and that Democrats must make up their minds to submit to "four years more of Radical rule with Radicalism controlling every department of the Government." This is all doubtless very true, but while our friend is at the confessional will he not ease his consolence is little by telling the truth about the re sult of the West Virginia State election We have urged him to correct his state ment, kept up in staring head-lines as late as the fourth day after the election, that West Virginia had given 3,000 Democratic majority. But not one ward in correction of it has ever appeared. If the editor of the Register is not equal to the task of writing a paragraph on this dreadfully unpleasant subject, we give him leave to copy from the INTEL-LIGENCER, either the returns in detail or the tabulated statements of the vote, Either would enable his readers to cipher out the truth-that is, those of Stevenson's majority523 The New York Sun auggests that when Gen. Grant becomes President, the Grade of General in the army should be extinguished. We quote. should be extinguished. We quote.

General Grant has enjoyed a military rank that has no precedent, in the history of the country. It was conterred upon him by the spontaneous movement of the people. His services were without parallel, and it was fitting that they should be correspondingly recognized. But it was never intended that the availed rank should become a pernized. But it was never intended that this exalted rank should become a permanent feature of our regular military eatablishment. It has atways been understood that the grade of General should end with Grant's tenure of the commission. It is now unnecessary to change this purpose. Gen. Sherman will be quite as competent to direct the operations of the army with his present rank, as if he were promoted General or Field Marshal. And when, by an unfortunate occurrence—long may or Field Marshal. And when, by an unfortunate occurrence—long may such an event be delayed!—the place of Sherman becomes vacant it will be equally needless that any new promotion should be made to the grade of Lieutenant General. For fifty years or more the country was well defended and prospered without a military officer of higher degree than a Major General. During most of the war we had no higher rank than that, although we kept a million of men in the field and fought as human beings scarcely ever fought before.

We yield to no one in affectionate gratitude toward the men who led us through the daugers and difficulties of the war. We know them and pay all honor to their skill, their courage, their manly self-devotion, their faithful patriotism. We have seen them at their great work, saying with their awords their country and ours. It is impossible to think of Grant, Sherman, Thomas, Sheridan, and thousands of others, as we have bebeld them egain and again, and the fiery hall and dreafful conflict of battle, without a thrill of en-conflict of battle, without a thrill of enthusiasm for their great qualities of bead and heart, and for the noble deeds they wrought.

But while all this is true, and is felt to be so by all classes of the people, it is time to prepare for a reduction of the army establishment. The pressure of taxation which weighs so heavily upon the industry and commerce of the nation must be lightened. The astonianting military power which the United States developed in the war was due not only to the moral character of the population, but to the wealth accumulated by prolonged absence of taxes. A stern and persistent effort mist now be made to regain that fortunate condition. Every public expenditure must be reduced to the limits of absolute necessity. No addition to the charges upon the tax-payers must be tolerated without the more imperative reason. These are principles of the itrat importance. We trast they will re respected by congress, and that the disposition to reduce the army as rapidly as possible, which has nitherto been manifested by that body, will be preserved and confirmed.
